PROSPECTIVE 1926 ACREAGE

State Department of Agriculture Summarizes Review of Field

A decrease in Iowa corn acreage for 1926 and increase of oats, spring wheat, potatoes and hay, are the important aspects of the farm program in Iowa this coming crop season.

The corn acreage in Iowa last season was estimated as 11,130,000. It will be two (2) per cent smaller this season if planting is reduced according to the prospects indicated by official crop reporters, or a total of about 10,907,000 acres. The corn acreage of the entire United States is not expected to show any considerable reduction from last year, probably less than one-half per cent decline.

These figures, states Leslie M. Carl, federal agricultural statistician, are issued to report the prospective acreages of various crops. Actual planted acreages are estimated on June 1 after all changes in the farming program have been settled.

The oats acreage is expected to increase about three per cent this season, from 6,089,000 acres harvested in 1925 to 6,270,000 acres to be seeded this spring. In the United States the acreage to be seeded to oats this season is expected to be nearly five per cent larger than a year ago.

Potato acreage reports indicate a probable increase of one per cent over the harvested area of 88,000 acres last year. A four per cent increase is expected for the entire country.

Low hay yields last year have brought some influence toward an increase of two per cent in acreage of all tame hay for the coming season, or a total of about 8,215,000 acres compared with 8,152,000 acres harvested in 1925.

The following reports on Iowa and the United States crop situation will be released during the coming three months: on Friday, April 9, reports on condition of winter wheat, rye and pasture; on Saturday, May 8, reports on area of winter wheat remaining to be harvested, condition of winter grain crops, hay and pasture; stocks of hay on farms, and progress of plowing and planting; on Wednesday, June 9 reports on condition of small grains, hay pasture and fruits; on June 23, a preliminary report for the corn belt states of the spring pig crop and intentions to breed for the fall pig crop.
